A Mother's Plea

Oh, Mother of Perpetual Help,
To you I send my plea,
Look down upon my loved son/daughter
Take care of him/her for me.
And when he's/she's blue and sick at heart,
Discouraged and oppressed,
Give him/her the will to carry on,
In heaven's grace to rest.
Show unto him/her a Mother's love,
As you have shown to me.
Bring comfort to his/her lonely heart
Is mine, his/her mother's plea.

ST. MICHAEL THE ARCHANGEL

A Miraculous Rescue

In York, England, during the reign of the monarch Charles II (1660-1685), some ruffians gained entrance to the convent of St. Mary and, amid curses and blasphemies, were making their way toward the chapel to outrage the Holy Eucharist.

The superioress of the convent had obtained permission, in case of extreme danger, to carry the Blessed Sacrament to safety. As the furious mob pressed into the convent, she hastened with her Sisters to the chapel. With trembling hands and reverential awe, she opened the tabernacle, grasped the ciborium, concealed it beneath her flowing mantle and turned to flee. But at that moment the persecutors pressed into the corridor leading to the chapel and cut off all means of escape. After a moment's reflection, the superioress commanded the Sisters to place the statue of St. Michael before the door of the chapel. At the same time, she cried out with a loud voice: “Great God, protect Thyself, for we are no longer able to rescue Thee!”

The cursing, raging mob had already reached the open door of the chapel when suddenly, in an inexplicable manner, the men shrank back, astounded and stupefied before the statue of St. Michael. In a few moments not a single one of the intruders remained in the convent.

In thanksgiving for this miraculous rescue, the statue of St. Michael was erected permanently at the entrance of the chapel and the feast of the Archangel was celebrated each year with great solemnity.
