Marilyn Forsmann ~ Update

Marilyn continues to progress and the reports from her nurses and therapists at Manor Care are that she is "very cooperative and tough, willing to do everything they ask of her". We finally had X-rays and an exam of her legs with a Dr. Alyea here in Spokane. He is one of the best. He gave her the green light to bear weight as tolerated. She immediately began walking with the help of a pair of parallel bars. She has since progressed to transferring herself from bed to walker to wheelchair and then transferring herself to the parallel bars. Each day, she goes a little further, puts a little more weight, and makes it a little longer. Her goal is to come to Bill & Dina's for Easter with her kids and grandkids and being able to transfer herself is the key to that goal. Marilyn is in good spirits and enjoying all the cards and visits. Thank you to all for your love and support. After Easter, we are guessing that she will soon be able to walk pretty well and we are all thinking and hoping that she'll be able to return to Grangeville to continue healing. We are not sure when and where that will be but we'll keep you posted.

Last Words of Christ

...(Magnificat)

"It is Finished"

These words, Lord, sound almost a note of relief after the long ordeal of suffering. But hey were not just the words of a man in pain about to pass beyond the threshold of death. You knew well in speaking them that you had completed your mission in becoming man.

Throughout your life you gave yourself to your Father's will, and now at the end, with the prophecies fulfilled, with all accomplished that you were asked to bear, you offered yourself in a final, definitive manner. Yet this completion, and the resurrection soon to follow, marked also a new beginning-of your Church and the fullness of your love in the Eucharist. May I never stop realizing more deeply your personal love in the Eucharist.

*"Father,
into your hands I commnd my spirit."*

Your last words, Lord, praying again a psalm, have great beauty. You suffered a real death, a true separation of body and soul, and every death involves a tearing and rupture from this life. But the words you speak to your Father as you are about to make this crossing anticipate the great joy of returning to your Father. You cast your human soul into your Father's hands as one would place a gift before an honored person. This last act was but a culmination of your life's constant self-offering. These last words make me long for your Father's embrace on my own last day. I realize better after hearing them, my own need to cast all things in my life into your hands.
